The Triple Bottom Line

How were going to get our employees to stay in our community and stay working in our community.

People

Everyone's well being is taken into consideration. The company offers health care, good working hours, a healthy, safe place to work, opportunities for advancement and education, and does not exploit their labor force.

Planet

Triple bottom line companies look at the entire life cycle of their actions and try to determine the true cost of what they're doing in regards to the environment.

Profit

When looking at profit from a triple bottom line standpoint, the idea is that profits will help empower and sustain the community as a whole, and not just flow to the CEO and shareholders.

At Community Futures, we're a family. Curious as to who else works with us?

"You have to be willing to put in the time, especially in the beginning and not expect much in return until your business is established which can sometimes take a few years."

Billy Taha
Billy Taha Trucking Ltd.

"It was certainly a struggle for the first few years but after a lot of hard work and perseverance we have established ourselves in Lac La Biche and are growing very rapidly."

Mike Hammons
Lac La Biche Equipment Rentals Ltd.

"We can and will expand based on the needs and changing industry of this thriving community, and with RCDC (Community Futures) behind us, anything is possible."

Cliff and Pam Holmes
Cliffy's Oilfield Transport Ltd.
